Attorney General Ford Works with Sherwin-Williams to Donate Masks, Gloves to First Responders and Nevada Health Care Workers

Carson City, NV – Today, Nevada Attorney General Aaron D. Ford facilitated a donation of personal protective gear by Sherwin-Williams to first responders and health care workers in Nevada. The paint and coating manufacturing company donated 5,000 N95 masks and 1,500 Nitrile gloves to the State of Nevada to help first responders and health care workers in need during Nevada's State of Emergency.

"During this COVID19 pandemic, we need all hands on deck to support our first responders and health care workers," said Attorney General Aaron D. Ford. "I am proud to have facilitated this donation, and I applaud the Sherwin-Williams team for lending a helping hand during Nevada's time of need. And I'm especially grateful for my First Assistant, Kyle George, who is currently filling in as the Governor's Interim General Counsel, for helping secure these supplies, which will help our first responders and health care workers tend to the needs of Nevadans faced with this illness."

"Sherwin-Williams applauds the work of all first responders who are always there for us, particularly now," added Jim Jaye, SVP Corporate Communications at Sherwin-Williams. "We're pleased we're able to donate this essential personal protective equipment at this critical time, and we're proud of our employees, who day in and day out, make it possible for Sherwin-Williams to continue to support our communities across the country."
